The Ellis Murder.

An investigation of the Ellis affair the burning of a barn and the finding of a man's body in the ruins, has brought to light the man's name-Howard, and that he was murdered for money.

Coroner Kohl empaneled a jury last week, heard some evidence and adjourned until Monday. After taking evidence nearly all day Monday a few years ago, and the many the jury brought in a verdict that the deceased came to his death at the han is of one Phelps and another party whose name the jury did not know. John Howard, the deceased, was about fifty years old, and as far as known had no relatives. He served five years in the regular army and was promoted to sergeant. For some time past he has been unable to support himself on account of a sore leg, and partly depended on charity although he worked at odd jobs around Ellis, when able to do so.
